Because of its strength in geographic targeting, EDDM is perfect for businesses that rely on walk-in traffic and in communities that enjoy supporting local businesses.

Consider these types of customers and others who are in similar fields:

- Lawn care
- Handyman/home repair
- Automotive dealers
- Dry cleaners
- Spas/salons
- Restaurants
- Delivery services
- Personal shopping services
- Real estate firms
- Tax preparers
- Home health care agencies
- Medical/dental providers

Upsell/Cross Sell Sales Scripts

One of the best ways to increase revenue using EDDM is to suggest it as an add-on to customers already placing an order, also known as upselling. Prime upsell opportunities for EDDM include:

- Customers ordering products such as business cards, flyers, menus, signage, or promotional items for any business that falls into the categories listed above.
- Customers ordering postcards for a business promotion mailing using a mailing list.

Once you've identified ideal prospects for EDDM, you're ready to approach them. Here are a couple of ways to start the conversation about the value EDDM can offer in building their business:

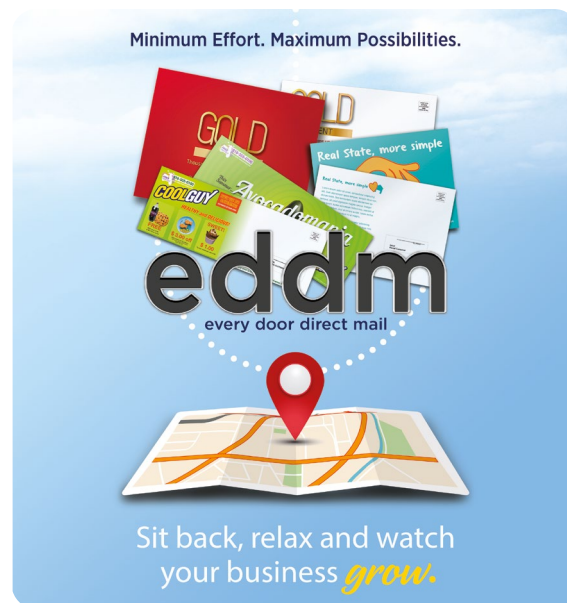

For an upsell where your customer in one of the vertical markets listed above is considering postcards using a mailing list, ask them if they've ever heard of EDDM.

Explain the highly targeted geographical benefit as well as the fact that there are no worries about whether the addresses on the list are still good. Mention how Full Service EDDM makes it easy and seamless for them to send a postcard campaign that blankets every residence on a particular mailing route.

For a cross sell, you are looking for customers in one of the vertical markets listed above who are ordering other products (like business cards, flyers, brochures, and signage to name a few). Ask them if they have ever considered doing a direct mail postcard for their business. Introduce EDDM by explaining that postcards—especially ones that seem personally targeted as opposed to junk mail—are rising in popularity. Next, mention EDDM's low cost-per-piece and high ROI, while also highlighting the highly targeted geographical benefit as well as the fact that there are no worries about whether the addresses on a mailing list are still good. Finally, explain how full-service EDDM makes it easy and seamless for anyone to send a postcard campaign.
