

The Ultimate Guide To Cold Call Mastery

0:00

all right my name's Conor Murray I've been in Enterprise software sales for seven years now at a Fortune 50 company

0:05

where I started as an SDR and worked my way up to the Enterprise account executive role and spent two of those

0:10

years as an SDR manager coaching thousands of reps how to transform their cold calling ability using the exact

0:16

framework I'll be covering in this video today so this is going to be a beast of a cold call video where we're going to start with does cold calling even work I see a lot of skepticism out there whether cold calling is even worth it

0:22

0:28

yes it is we'll cover that two how to overcome the fear and overall anxiety of cold calling three honing in your

0:35

tonality and confidence which is over 90% of your success on cold calls four how to build lists efficiently before

0:42

you ever pick up the phone so that you can make calls more effectively and scale up your call volume through a process I call coiling the spring we're going to cover the value statement framework this is the cold call

0:48

0:53

framework that I've seen transform many reps ability and certainly transformed mine and then we're going to get into

0:59

the nitty gritty call call openers scripts how you can create your own optimizing your process so you can go from making

1:05

$30 a day to $100 a day without working more and then objection handling techniques as well so let's get into it but first exciting announcement for a could call course Community I launched

1:10

1:17

with higher levels I get a ton of requests for coaching and I put everything I know in my brain here I've

1:23

gone more in depth than I ever have on the techniques taught in this video on my channel in general where you can get

1:28

live feedback and live live coaching it's all included as part of the community so check out the links in the

pinned comment below in the description hope to see you in there but with that let's get into the actual video so all

Does Cold Calling Even Work?

right let me get my head out of the way here so first I want to get you bought into cold calling because I'm sure a lot of you are but I'm sure there's a lot of

1:47

you on the fence and the short answer is yes it works better than ever just probably not with the techniques and the way you've probably been taught following common sales enablement training or following sales gurus on the

1:53

1:59

internet so things like permission-based crazy permission-based openers pattern interrupts humor hey this is a cold

call you're going to hate me you have 27 seconds for me to tell you why I'm calling leading off with series of

2:11

open-ended questions before giving the Pro Prospect proper context for your call you just interrupted someone's day

2:18

you've barely told them the purpose of your call and you're just going to ask them a series of questions survey style

2:24

yeah that's not going to be received very well by most people and essentially being trained to run Discovery calls on cold calls without taking into account what I just shared the nuances that you've generally just interrupted a busy

2:30

2:36

Prospect day they probably have a meeting coming up within the next two minutes and they don't have time for you to ask a series of directional

2:43

open-ended questions unless you tell them the purpose of your call so cold calling is more effective than ever with

2:51

the proper framework in place and that's the value statement framework I'll be covering later in the video where you

2:57

use a repeatable structure where you don't need to to overthink between every cold call no pulling up LinkedIn and

3:03

doing 5 minutes of research in between every call it's a repeatable structure properly organizing your contact list

before even worrying about picking up the phone a lot of cold call success becomes comes before you actually ever

press dial and it's the way you structure yourself you organize yourself your list so that you have things

3:23

physically ready to do you have large list created for yourself and you can just go go go with that repeatable

structure taking control and answering three key questions who you are why

3:33

you're calling and what you want this is something I'll be covering in depth later on in the video and it's that

3:38

missing context that a lot of common sales enablement doesn't teach you to deliver also very few players remain on

the cold call field at this point if you're still making cold calls just know that you're a rare breed and

3:53

congratulations because most people these days most even sdrs and account Executives prefer hide behind the comfort of email and social media like LinkedIn where they don't have to take as direct or be ready to face direct

4:00

4:07

rejection most people don't have the guts to cold call these days I would estimate this is I don't have any hard

4:14

data I would estimate that the typical Prospect receives 100 emails for every one cold call they receive and the reason where why I estimate this is because in my role where I am I always get I get a lot of cold emails asking

4:21

4:28

about people reaching out about CR M systems things like that I think I can count on one hand the number of times

4:33

I've been cold and I've received hundreds of emails there's not many people on the field and just cold

4:39

calling is hard to do it's hard to get yourself to do it it's hard to get good at it and therefore valuable even Beyond

4:45

sales generally things that are hard to do are the most valuable thing so if you want to Future proof yourself I think a lot of the cold email LinkedIn stuff that's easily going to be able to get automated over time everyone's blasting

4:52

4:58

out automated C SE quences cold calling is what's going to be left something that's hard to automate and it's a unique skill that they can't take away from you so next how do we overcome this

Overcoming The Fear Of Cold Calling

5:09

fear of cold calling if it's something you deal with it's certainly something that I dealt with for a long time and I thought it was because I just wasn't motivated or other things similar to that when in reality what I learned is that the majority if not all of cold call anxiety for most people stems from not having a repeatable structure or a

5:15

5:22

repeatable framework in place it causes you to have to rewire your brain before

5:34

every cold call because you're calling different people you don't have a plan for when that Prospect says hello that's where every cold call starts you end up being so concerned on these calls with what to say next you're asking certain

5:39

5:45

questions you don't know how they're going to answer it you're worried about what they're going to say you start thinking ahead oh boy their their

5:51

response is almost up I got to say something after this and you lose control of the cold call a lot another

5:57

mistake is you introduce too much variance in to your cold calls we're going to cover this in detail later but

6:02

essentially you cause your cold calls to go in so many different directions that you can't be prepared for and another

6:08

mistake you call lists with too many different personas on them so you'll have a list of people and you'll call a

6:14

VP of sales and then the next person you call is a digital marketer and then the next person's a director of it back to

6:20

that point of now you got to rewire your brain for every Cole call because you have to say something different to all of these different personas because they

6:26

care about different things so the most I've methods for overcoming cold call

6:31

anxiety is having a repeatable framework that allows you to maintain control of the coal call so you know what to do at every layer of the coal call and are prepared for every outcome that's the 6:44

6:38

value statement framework we'll be covering calling lists of contacts that have similar buying triggers so either a list of people that all have the same job title they work in the same department they all work in the same

6:50

6:55

industry or the same Market segment or some combination of the so that you're calling people who are all very similar

7:02

or have homogeneous characteristics tracking your results and becoming a detached cold call machine I think this is the best way to overcome anxiety because everything just becomes a data point even if it's a hard no that

7:09

7:15

something it's a data point you can log in your spreadsheet if it's a yes you can log that you can track certain

7:20

objections and now you actually understand the why behind your results what's demoralizing is when you go two

7:26

weeks without results and you can't really understand what's been going going wrong this helps you do that and

7:31

then fourth just understanding you'll never see or hear from any of these people who hang up on you ever again if

7:36

you get blown out on a call you just got to get to the point where it's funny it's part of the process this is why we make the big bucks this is why as at 7:44

entry level SDR positions sometimes you can earn over six figures or close to that amount for an entry-level position

7:50

if we didn't have to deal with this stuff then we'd just be customer service representatives and we wouldn't even be making half the money we're probably

7:57

getting paid these days so just know that it's this stuff that actually is the reason why you want to get into this

8:02

role in the first place next cold call tonality and

Cold Call Tonality & Confidence

8:08

confidence so a lot of sales expressions are used out there I don't always agree with all of them but one is that tone is

8:16

90% of your success on coal calls I think this is 1,000% true and it's probably more like

8:22

95% just know all it takes is a good enough script yes we're going to work on our scripts and make our scripts as good

8:28

in as effective as we can but just know with the right tone and the right confidence and you can make an average

script work very well for yourself so don't stress and agonize over every word you're saying because a lot of times the prospects aren't even registering everything you're saying because you're coming at them a million miles an hour and you just interrupted their day again

8:41

they're thinking about something else it's a lot of it subconscious like does this person sound confident competent

8:54

like they've been here and done this before and could potentially be worth spending more time with so the majority of your focus yes we need a good enough script in place it needs to make sense and it needs to logically lead the

prospects to the conclusion that it could be worth taking a meeting with us but most of your focus should be on your

9:12

delivery and rehearsing it so that it's muscle memory and flows off your tongue so confidence comes to that point from

repetition and experience literally just rehearsing your scripts 10 minutes a day so that it flows off your tongue and you get little things down like little inflections pauses it helps you sound more natural because anytime you first

9:25

9:31

put a script together you're going to sound rehearsed and robotic so it comes from repetition and experience

9:37

confidence and then also having a repeatable structure so that you know what you're going to do on the cold call

9:43

it's all muscle memory and then also just understand your value to prospects

9:48

get rid of this idea that you're bothering people this is something I see new reps I definitely felt this way I had impostor syndrome I was calling into people often times Executives that had 30 years of EXP experience and in my 10:00

9:53

head I'm like I barely understand what my company even does or the value of my solution yet how am I supposed to be 10:06

valuable to Someone Like A VP of it in their 50 and you just have to understand that what you're doing here is 10:12

positioning yourself as a valuable resource to them going forward all of these one well let's take a step back if

10:18

your company has a position in the marketplace it's because it delivers real value to customers most companies

10:24

go out of business it's like 95% so just the fact that your company is in the marketplace hiring sdrs means it has a

10:31

valuable solution and and can be very valuable to the people that you're calling and really what we're doing here

10:37

is positioning ourselves as a valuable resource going forward we don't need to sell the whole value of our Solution on 10:43

a cold call these people have priorities and pain points that they need to be working on there's a million people

10:49

reaching out to them there's they don't even know where to get started half the time you're cutting through the noise and saying here I am you're putting it on a silver platter here I am here are the priorities and challenges I work on that are very relevant to you I'd like to introduce you to my team we've worked with tons of people like you in your industry and we'd like to discuss how

10:55

11:06

we've done so with you and to a lot of people that's very valuable they have internal meetings and they just 11:11

generally don't have anyone to reach out to or nowhere to go you're cutting through that the highest impact methods

11:17

to master your tonality and confidence these are the quickest Roi areas I can 11:23

give anyone that's trying to become more effective on the phones there's a lot of things you can work on you don't always 11:28

want to CH everything at once you want to take them one at a time these are the one at the first one at a time things

11:34

you want to focus on one is replacing all passive language with stronger more

11:40

assumptive language so a lot of what passive language sounds like it's most common when it comes time to ask for the 11:46

meeting because you don't have that internal confidence you put little caveats like if you're interested I'd

11:53

love to set up some time next week if you're free it usually starts with if if you're interested if you're open to it

11:59

it doesn't sound assumptive so just by replacing that instead of if you're interested I'd love to set up some time

12:05

replacing it with yeah I'm looking to set up some time next week just to get introduced and aligned with your priorities going forward how's your 12:11

calendar look on Wednesday or Thursday it's more I'm looking to set some time or let set some time the underlying

12:17

assumption in the language is that this meeting is implied not asking if they're interested or open to it this small

12:24

tweak can dramatically improve your results and on top of that replacing an

12:29

upward inflecting tone with a stronger more downward inflecting tone usually these two go hand in hand when you're

12:35

using passive language you use an upward inflecting tone if you're interested I'd love to set up some time next week if you're free and it it sounds with an upward inflection where you more

12:41

want to have that downward inflexion great yeah

12:47

I'm looking to set some time this week just to get introduced in line with your priorities going forward has that downward inflection those two things

12:54

together are the quickest ROI to getting more effective on the phones and then you want to strike the right balance

12:59

this is with your overall Cole call script of being concise measured and most importantly natural AKA you want to 13:07

sound human and this is to that repetition and practice Point that's how you do it a lot of people we're going to 13:13

cover value statements and how you can create them when they first start delivering them when you listen you can almost hear them reading it or you can

13:20

just sense that they're delivering a pre-prepared script and it's totally fine to read I still read scripts to 13:27

this day you just have to not sound sound like you're reading so you have to take Natural pauses and things like that

13:32

almost sound like you're thinking sometimes again going to show you some examples later in this video but sounding natural and sounding human

13:39

sounding like you're personally reaching out to them and not just another sales rep avoid all gimmicky markety language

13:46

things like that anything that can set off alarm bells in the prospect's head because a lot of this is subconscious so

13:52

those are by far the highest impact areas when it comes to Coal call tonality and confidence all right now

How To Build Lists Efficiently (Coil the Spring)

13:57

we're going to get into building list this is so important this comes before you ever pick up the phone a lot

14:04

of this comes down to how effectively you set yourself up so that when you wake up each day you know what to do

14:10

rather than having to come up with what to do because once you're good on the phones the next step is being able to 14:16

make more dials it's cool if you become good on the phones but if you can only make 20 dials a day that's nowhere near

14:21

as good as if you can be equally as effective but make $80 a day or $100 a day and that's what coiling the spring

14:27

is for so the first thing you want to do is reverse engineer what you normally need to do in order to make cold calls

14:33

just think about it typically you sit down it's 8:00 a.m. you got to start your day you think all right I got to pick some specific accounts to go

14:40

after or specific leads to contact then I got to add them to a list in my CRM system then I generally have to think of 14:47

a talk track that I'm going to say to them which could change if they all have a bunch of different job titles and personas then in between calls I have to 14:54

pull up their LinkedIn or their company website in order to personalize the call and make it more targeted and all of 14:59

this creates daily friction and impacts both your productivity and your motivation because when it's hard to 15:05

make cold calls it decreases your motivation levels too so this is what

15:10

slows you down because often times there's distractions if work in an office you can sit down you start

15:16

working on your list your first call is at 10:30 or like a I got plenty of time someone comes over talks to you for a little bit then you got to go get coffee then your manager asks you to do something next thing you know it's 9:47

15:22

15:28

and you haven't even finished your list yet you have less than 45 minutes till you have to take your first meeting and it totally disrupts your flow so

15:34

question why not just take all the time to complete these activities for yourself up front it's like meal prep if you've ever followed a workout plan it's it's more efficient yes it takes a little run time you spend three hours on 15:46

15:41

Sunday but then you have all your meals laid out for the entire week so that you can just focus on execution it's the same thing in cold calling you want to wake up knowing what you will be doing each day knowing what list you're going

15:52

15:57

to Target having the Associated scripts ready to go rather than having to come up with what to do so you the first and 16:05

most important way to do this is create lists that fit your icps your key icps

16:10

and or buying triggers so what are your top job titles what departments do they work in what industries are they in 16:17

market segments like are they above a certain Revenue threshold or below is it a certain employee count whatever buying

16:23

triggers Your solution that you sell has value for you want to identify those and create your ideal icps and build as many of these as you can over time but start with the most important ones like

16:30

the top five and really to do this you need

16:36

three simple capabilities I know there's a lot of CRM tools out there I get asked about this a lot but break it down you really need to do three things you need to be able to filter leads by things like job title or Department Industry it could be geography once you have them filtered you need to click a button and be able to add them to a list and then

16:42

16:48

16:54

you need to be able to contact them one by one via the phone lots of tools out there to do this but those are the three

17:00

three key things you need to be able to do so some examples if you sell a marketing automation platform where you might call both marketing personas and sales personas you could just have a list of VPS of marketing in my territory

17:07

17:14

or VPS Marketing in retail and now we're going to make a similar script to VPS of marketing but just slightly tweak it to 17:20

be more targeted to retail priorities it could be a different title digital marketers in banking or VPS of sales if

17:27

I'm sure a lot of marketing automation platforms sales is another common Persona and building out all of these

17:33

key IPS getting massive lists ready for yourself because then we're going to get into making scripts that are targeted

17:39

for all of those lists so that we can go down one by one and basically say the same thing to all of them knowing it's going to be a very relevant targeted script for them so now we can create a repeatable script that's going to be

17:44

17:51

highly targeted for each of these lists so let's get in to how to do that

using the value statement framework so the

The Value Statement Framework

17:59

value statement framework is designed with the following principles and beliefs in mind these are some of the 18:04

differences I have with the common sales enablement training out there one is that the burden of proof when we make a

18:10

cold call and interrupt someone's day the burden of proof is on us as the cold caller to deliver value first before we

18:17

ask anything in return and typically what we ask in return too early are for their time and to just for them to 18:23

answer a bunch of questions that we have before we've given them enough context so in the beginning we will be taking

18:29

control and doing most if not all of the talking for the first 30 to 45 seconds

18:35

of the call and we're going to answer three questions in those 30 to 45 seconds who we are why we are calling

18:41

them specifically and what we want which is generally time on our calendar we're going to State our intent we're focused

18:47

on selling time we're selling the meeting again we're not selling our entire value proposition we're not

18:53

running a discovery call and doing all this qualifying you can do a little bit of that but we're not doing 10 minutes of that the purpose for our call is we have identified a key ICP we know we can potentially be a big value add for them and we would like to set up a meeting

19:00

19:06

either for ourselves or our account executive whoever it is in order to discuss this further we don't need to 19:12

sell the whole value of the solution we're going to position ourselves as a valuable resource to them moving forward

19:18

in key business areas that we know the prospect is likely to care about so

19:24

before we get into it some other goals of the value statement framework is designed to give you control over the 19:29

cold call process and for you to be prepared at every layer of the cold call so if there's objections how to handle

19:36

those when to expect them things like that so it's not just this random process where you're asking questions

19:41

hoping they sound interested enough to the point where you could go for the meeting that's not a scalable process it's designed for you to be targeted at

19:49

scale one value statement that we create should work for a large list of leads we

19:54

plan to contact again VPS of marketing that work in the retail industry we can create one script that's targeted for 20:00

that specific thing and it's going to sound very targeted to most of them very likely it's designed to take key nuances

20:07

of coal calling into account that common sales enablement doesn't like that we're generally interrupting a busy working

20:13

professional and that if we create too much variance at the coal call they're probably going to give us a defensive tone and try and hang up so we want to 20:20

take control hijack them so that they don't go into fight or flight mode and can and let them know early on who we

20:26

are why we're calling what we want we sound confident competent like we've been here and done this before and 20:31

they're a lot more likely to receive that well and they're going to appreciate it whether they like it or not that you were just straight to the 20:38

point even though we interrupted their day we don't need to ask permission and then the value statements are designed to give you multiple shots on net or probabilities of booking the meeting so

20:44

20:49

this is a key Nuance I think a lot of common scripts Overlook is that every call call is a percent chance that we 20:55

book a meeting and therefore generate a qualified opportunity so I want to design these scripts around selling time

21:02

and give ourselves multiple chances or multiple probabilities of booking the meeting and then our goal is to increase

21:08

those probabilities as we become more skilled we work on our tone we tweak our value statements to be more targeted

Cold Call Openers

21:15

Etc so let's get in and start with cold call openers for the value statement

21:20

framework my goal is to deliver what I call an assumptive formality remember

21:26

one of our key stated goals of the value statement framework is to maintain control and limit all opportunities for 21:33

variance so essentially the goal here is to get a quick formality or slash response from the prospect whatever it is uh good how are you what is this regarding and then get right into the value statement and take control and it can sound like good thanks yeah the reason I'm calling is or I'm just reaching out because and then we're going to tell them who we are why we're

21:40

21:45

21:51

calling what we want but we want to signal to them in that opening with our tonality that we're not here to waste

21:57

time we have something to say next and we're going to get right into it and the key to doing that is a downward

22:03

inflection so some common techniques that inadvertently cause this term I keep using variance that I hear is one

22:10

and I made all these mistakes one confirming their name and title like hi am I speaking with John Smith the CFO at 22:16

blank company or something like that this causes fight ORF flight mode now they know oh this is a stranger I wasn't expecting this call just think about like play that in your head hi am I speaking with Conor Murray I'd be like

22:22

22:27

pretty pretty guarded i' I'd be like what Bill did I forget to pay or something like that like I I'd get pretty nervous so you don't need to confirm because you're going to learn anyway whether it's the right person if it's the complete wrong person they'll stop you so I get the

22:34

22:40

intent you don't want to waste your or their time but you're going to learn within 10 seconds anyway so don't create that opportunity for variants ask asking

22:47

per permission so I'll put a little star here this doesn't always create variants but in the way that most people deliver

22:53

it it does so it can be like things like hey did I cat you at a bad time here hey do you have 30 seconds for me to tell

22:59

you why I'm calling then you can decide whether you want to continue the conversation usually when it has that upward inflecting tone you're kind of 23:05

signaling that you're going to be here a while and you more want to signal that you're here not to waste time and you're going to get right into it or just doing too much in general like you're going to hate me this is a cold call all of this

23:11

23:17

you don't know how they're going to respond to this and it just makes it harder for you to get right into why you're calling and delivering the actual

23:24

value statement so I'll do a few examples here maybe you'll be able to see the difference so to this day I just

23:30

say how are you or how have you been but notice the downward inflection hey Jim this is Conor Murray

23:36

calling from XYZ company have you been so I sound what I call professionally

23:41

enthusiastic but now listen to we'll do number two same thing with an upward inflection hey Jim this is Conor Murray

23:47

call from XYZ company how have you been it's the same words but the first one

23:52

signals I have something to say next and that this is a formality the second one sort of signals to the Prospect and

23:58

again this a lot of this is subconscious like uh I've been good who is this I have a meeting in 2 minutes I don't have

24:04

how long is this conversation going to go that's why you start to get these defensive tones hey Jim this is Conor

24:09

Murray call from XYZ company how are you it's a downward inflection

hey Jim this Connor call from XYZ company how are you

24:16

today same thing but the upward inflection signals to the prospect you might be here a while so for example

24:23

three and four I'll use the permission-based opener I know I'm hard on it sometimes but a lot of people are able to deliver it confidently as a downward inflection so here's what an upward inflecting permission based

24:28

24:34

opener sounds like hey Jim this is Conor M call from XYZ company do you have 30 seconds for me to tell you why I'm 24:40

calling and then you can decide whether you want to continue the conversation and then the downward inflection of that would be hey J it's Conor Murray call from XYZ company do you have 30 seconds for me to tell you why I'm calling and then you can decide whether you want to continue the conversation it wouldn't be my Preferred Choice of opener but you can see how it

24:45

24:50

24:56

was the same permission-based opener but you want to signal with that downward inflection that you expect and are ready

25:02

to tell them something after this and you're going to be concise and to the point what you don't want to signal is 25:08

that upward inflection that you might be here a while and this comes with practice you can literally measure

25:13

yourself in your pitch rate how often you're able to get past the opening because I don't want to the opening to 25:19

be this big thing you have to concern yourself with ideally it goes the same way every single time most of the 25:25

responses I get are along the lines of uh good how are you it could be uh good what is this regarding

25:31

do uh good what is this what is this regarding sorry I don't have your number I'd say good yeah I'm just reaching out

25:37

because and just get right into it whatever they take or whatever they give you you just want to take it and get

Creating Cold Call Scripts

25:43

right into it so now what a lot of you probably came here for how to create a 25:48

cold call script designed to follow all of these principles once we get the assumptive formality and we get right in

25:55

the reason I'm calling is or that I'm just reaching out because we answer who we are why we're calling what we want

26:01

and ideally we're targeting about a 30second delivery so breaking these down the who you are is very simple it's

26:07

generally just one line tell them your name the company you work for and your title or your role that's relevant to them two the why you're calling this is the most important piece it's the value of why you're reaching out to them it's

26:13

26:18

the value part of the value statement where you essentially answer two questions what priorities and pain

26:23

points do you solve that are relevant to them and at a high level how do you solve them and then the third piece is

26:29

what you want which is generally time on their calendar so I'll run through an example here in this example I'm selling

26:36

soft Financial applications to finance personas that work specifically in the insurance industry so I bolded all the 26:43

areas I changed knowing that this is a finance Persona in insurance but if I was calling a VP of HR in banking I could replace all everything I've bolded in parenthesis while keeping the structure the same that repeatable

26:50

26:55

structure but instead of naming Finance priorities I'll name HR priorities and say I'm part of the HR applications team

27:02

if it's sales and marketing you could say I'm part of the sales automation team or the marketing automation team Etc so here's an example assumptive

27:09

formality to start hey J this is Conor Murray call from XYZ company how have you been good I'm just reaching out

27:16

because I'm part of the financial applications team here that works with insurance organizations on priorities

27:22

related to claims analysis fraud detection and risk assessment usually by working with clients to implement bi

27:28

capabilities that segment customers and analyze claims in real time and then also to create customizable dashboards

27:35

that are interactive and made for self-service reporting and I know that's high level but I'll be your main point of contact here for any priorities you do have in these areas going forward resources you may need anything like that and I know I kind of called you out

27:48

the blue here too so I was actually more looking to set some time later this week just to get introduced and align with your priorities going forward how's your calendar look on Wednesday or Thursday this week week so let's break this down

27:54

28:00

it started with the assumptive formality and then that first sentence was simply who I am I'm reaching out because I'm 28:05

part of in this case the financial applications team that works with insurance organizations that's who I am

28:10

that's enough for me to sound relevant to them then the first sentence here these are the priorities or pain points

28:17

that I saw I work on priorities related to and I named Insurance specific priorities I know we're likely to be

28:22

relevant to this person claims analysis fraud detection and risk assessment and then part two at a high level how we

28:28

solve them implementing bi capabilities that segment customers and analyze claims in real time and also to create

28:34

customizable dashboards that are interactive and made for self-service reporting then I finish with the 28:39

sentence it's a little bit optional positioning myself as a high level resource for them for any priorities

28:44

they do have in these areas going forward resources they need may need anything like that and then this last piece was the what time on their

28:51

calendar now I have answered those three questions who I am why I'm calling what I want a lot of questions or maybe it's a question you're thinking that it

28:58

sounds like a lot yes it is but this is the point this is a real pattern interrupt most people don't call and 29:04

just take initiative and take control most could callers call and they ask a series of open-ended questions that make

the prospect roll their eyes and are like H another one of these you sound different when you do this and it's not

29:16

as long as you think it's about 30 seconds and I promise you when you're concise and you sound confident and what 29:22

you're saying sounds highly relevant to them they will listen most of the time yes sometimes occasionally you get

29:29

people that will hang up on you in the middle that's totally fine most people otherwise subconsciously appreciate that

29:35

you didn't do the typical dance back and forth you have 30 seconds blah blah question wondering how long this is going to take you got right to the point set a whole bunch of things that sounded relevant to them you're positioning

29:41

29:46

yourself as a resource going forward and you're giving them an out you understand they're a busy working professional and that they might not have time for a 5 to 10 minute call right now so that if that's the case we can actually do this

29:52

29:57

later later and that's why I was actually reaching out so I'm sure a lot of you sell a whole variety of different

30:03

solutions this framework works not even just this is a tech sales example this works in real estate financial advisors

30:11

solar sales Auto Sales you name it these are repeatable principles that work

30:16

regardless of industry and Market segment getting to the point taking control that confident downward

30:22

inflecting tone this is what works so you can take what I put in parenthesis here and make it relevant to your 30:28

Solutions and the types of personas you reach out to and ideally you build as many of these out as possible so that you have Finance personas in banking finance personas and wealth management finance personas and Retail and then you can get to the specific title level CFOs and insurance VPS of fpna and insurance control controllers in banking Etc so that you can follow this repeatable structure and you have in this case you could have a hundred finance personas

30:34

30:39

30:48

30:53

that work in Insurance probably say the same thing to all of them and you can be very confident that it's going to be a highly relevant targeted script for them and no you don't need to pull up their LinkedIn you don't need to go on their

31:00

31:06

company website and research a whole bunch of priorities so that you sound confident or sound more targeted on the 31:11

could call it let the confidence do the talking it's all in the delivery and when you first put these together yeah

31:18

it usually takes a little practice I know when I started using this framework I was a little rusty I sounded scripted

31:24

but I could feel with this structure that the calls I was making were being better received and that if I just keep making kept making a few more tweaks I'd eventually get there and I did so take

31:30

31:35

this framework and then what comes next is how you can optimize this could call process so that again the goal is to not

Optimizing Your Cold Call Process

31:43

have to research do a bunch of research so that it's hard to make 20 or $30 a day we want to get up to that 8100 level

31:51

because we're able to just press dial not overthink in between each contact so

31:57

from my observation and I was in this boat most sales reps do nowhere near enough volume I see a lot of 25 to 40 dials a day and I tell people it's not because you're not

32:04

32:09

working hard I don't want to be like finger Waggy hey you just got to work harder work longer show up early make more dials it's genuinely because you're not structuring your day to be more efficient a lot of times the people making 30 dials a day are actually

32:16

32:22

working way harder than the people making a 100 dials a day but it's because they're doing all of that

32:27

research in between every coal call and they're just making the process too hard on themselves so 80% of the battle is

that coiling the spring process we covered and having your lists and your scripts ready to go for yourself your

32:39

key icps like Finance personas Insurance the one we just did so that when I sat down that day I had a hundred people of 32:46

Finance personas in insurance and I had that script ready to go and it took me zero minutes to get going I can just

32:52

start clicking dial it's also understanding like I said you don't need to do research before every call to book

32:59

a meeting I've seen it play out it's absolutely not necessary to pull up their LinkedIn or their company in order to be effective on the phones and set meetings just understand that this is the point you got to get to where you can just Dial Dial Dial Dial so I see a lot of reps go from making $30 a day to $100 a day implementing this framework and it actually takes them less time so

33:05

33:13

33:20

and it's not like volume cures everything but it cures a lot so volume

33:26

helps one of this is one of the most important points volume helps you ride out variance in answer rates and set

33:32

rates anyone who's made cold calls for a while knows when it's hot it's hot and when it's cold it's cold you'll go 50

33:39

dials without a single answer and then the next 15 dials you make 10 people answer but if had you just only made 40

33:46

or 50 dials it would have been a total waste a day you would have gotten no feedback no skill development nothing to

33:52

measure when you're making upwards of even 70 is really good but ideally you can get to that 80 to 100 range you are

33:59

it is unlikely you will get no answers you will at least get some feedback so it helps you write out variants and

34:05

answers and set rates because Beyond just answer rates a lot of times it's just cold with prospects you can go a week without booking a meeting and then you find that one account where you book six meetings within the count and it

34:10

34:16

just gets you right back to your average so you also accelerate your skill development you get way better at cold

34:22

calling way faster when you're making more dials and getting more repetitions and and answers and Prospects you talk

34:29

to and then this do I know this doesn't apply to everyone but it majorly boosts your brand a lot of you are sdrs at 34:35

corporations your end goal is to get to an SMB account executive role and eventually to an Enterprise role when 34:41

you're able to make a $100 a day consistently that's special most people are not doing that and a lot of the 34:47

managers they see your name at the top of the list like wow how are they doing this let's have them teach other reps

34:54

who are struggling to make more than 30 what their process is here it's a major B brand booster and in the worst case

35:00

scenario I know that it's been a little bit of a rough job market out there it offers a lot of protection if maybe the results aren't there yet but you can point to the fact that you're doing the right things every day and making a

35:06

35:11

hundt dials there's really no downsides to it and all upside it's just putting in a process so that you can easily do

35:18

it and just lastly on this point just think about how long does it take to actually make $100 I think a lot of people overestimate this from what I've found if you're making $100 dials on the low end the average amount of time a

35:24

35:31

dial takes is 1 minute and on the high end it's 3 minutes and the reason is because that counts dials that go straight to voicemail or aren't answers that are like 5 Seconds long so that brings down the average and then yeah you might have some lives that go 5

35:37

35:44

minutes long but what I found is if it's only a minute hopefully it's not because that means probably not a not a lot of 35:50

people were answering but that's 100 minutes that's like an hour and a half close to 2 hours and if it's more

35:55

towards that 3 minute side then it's 3 minutes which is a little bit over 3 hours so yeah a lot of cold calling but

36:02

very doable in the SDR role if your day is not packed with meetings already but

36:07

the only way to do that is if you truly are just making dial after dial and not having to do research in between if

36:13

you're doing research in between on LinkedIn or their company website this that number turns into like five or six hours so just understand that you don't need to do that and you want to get to the point where you're able to consistently make I like a 100 but even

36:20

36:27

70 or 80 a day is really good and then lastly I just want to touch on the topic of objection handling

Objection Handling

36:34

so let's say you deliver that value statement I did earlier I positioned myself as a resource and asked for the 36:41

eating and their first response is uh no we already have ABC we have a different

36:47

solution in place for this the first line of defense is to what I call Double

36:52

Down and sell the time so don't get thrown off yet acknowledge whatever their concern is and tell them it makes

36:58

sense to me anyway this is a repeatable framework but it can sound different depending on the objection so if they

37:03

said yeah thanks for reaching out we already have ABC solution in place for this so I don't see why it would make 37:09

sense to me instead of immediately asking them how's that system going for you when you implement it is there renewal coming up do you have any priorities in the near future I would say got it yeah that's actually why I was reaching out we work with customers of ABC all the time so if there's ever a fit we can move ahead but I still think

37:14

37:19

37:26

it at least makes sense to to briefly introduce you to my team because we'll be the main ones supporting you for any

37:31

future priorities you have in these areas going forward so would later this week or early next week fit your

37:37

schedule so I'm not selling my solution yet I'm doubling down on what I

37:43

requested which was the meeting I'm doubling down and selling the time because what I've found is a lot of 37:48

prospects naturally will decline your first request to a meeting even if they

37:53

found what you said to be valuable because they're just not they're just not wired to give out their time so

37:59

freely but if you double down confidently like this a lot of people will then say yes and you know you have

38:05

an ideal customer profile that you're talking to ideally so yeah usually there's some questions after that but

38:11

you kind of naturally lead into booking the meeting from there so that'll work sometimes and again this is a shot on

38:17

net it's not even going to work the majority of the time it'll work a good amount as you get good at it and with your tone but then this is what I mean

38:24

about being prepared that's your first line of defense whatever objection

is double down and sell the time and then

be prepared and expecting for them to push back even further and your second line of defense is to ask a targeted

38:37

question to build credibility or it can end up oftentimes being two or three targeted questions to build more

38:42

credibility because if they're still on the phone with you at this point they're signaling they have time to talk this is a key distinction I have is now is where you can open up the conversation because you've delivered Value First you've told

38:49

38:55

them who you are why you're calling in what you want you've stated your intent you doubled down and sold the time and 39:01

they're still at they're still on the phone with you engaging with you now you have earned the right to open up the

39:07

conversation and hopefully build a little more credibility for yourself because that's what's lacking at this point the math equation they're doing in

39:14

their head is does this person sound confident and competent enough that it won't be a waste of my time to set aside

39:22

30 more minutes to meet with them after this and hopefully these targeted questions help flip that from a no to a

39:28

yes so they could respond I double down I sell the time they'll say okay yeah I'll write your name down but we should be all set for a while feel free to reach back out in a few months though I would say okay yeah I'll definitely stay

39:34

39:40

in contact but quick question when you say you already have ABC solution in place does that support XY and Z

39:47

processes and the reason I ask is because normally when we work with customers of ABC there can be gaps in those areas filled by other Solutions like blank and blank and there's usually a big opportunity to consolidate the

39:53

39:59

architecture onto a single system so this is where we're starting to get a little more advanced and this is stuff

40:05

you want to pre-prepare depending on the title and even the objection so if they

40:10

say we already use a solution that's where you want to be able to know okay what how do you typically work with 40:16

customers of that solution you probably know okay that's a point solution that fills one specific Gap where my solution

40:22

is more of a comprehensive platform solution so you want to be able to call out and give more context this is a key

40:29

line and the reason I ask so don't just ask the question this is where a lot of reps fall short they'll just say so when 40:35

you already have ABC solution in place does that support X and Y and Z processes and that's not enough meat on 40:41

the bone that's where the prospects start to give you a defensive tone because they don't want they don't know where you're going with this so you want to give them the context and the reason I ask is because and if you say something like this now you're signaling

40:46

40:52

to them you're giving them more evidence that you are someone who has been here and done this before and it could be a good use of their time to to spend 30 more minutes with you potentially even bring on other team members and even

40:58

41:04

stake their brand they don't want to the last thing they want to do is bring one of their peers to a call like this and

41:10

have it be a total waste of their time but when you say something like this it signals to them it it builds a lot of 41:15

credibility in their eyes and one last Point too is you want yes you want to engage with them a little bit here

41:21

they're signaling that they have some time to talk to you but you still want to be pulling it back to a meeting so hopefully now there giving you a little bit more context and you can say something like got it yeah and that again that's why I reached out this is what I think we should be covering on

41:28

41:34

this next call and naturally give yourself another shot on net and do this as long as it takes sometimes it's one

41:40

question sometimes it's three and sometimes you're not able to get it over the line and that's fine but that's how this framework is designed is your first

41:47

shot on net is that value statement where you proactively avoid a lot of objections and variants you otherwise

41:52

would have faced then you double down and sell the time as your first line of defense and then then your second third

41:58

fourth or however long it takes is a series of targeted questions where you're aiming to build more credibility

42:04

but still pulling it back to setting the meeting and selling the time which is the purpose of your Outreach so again
